People also are struck by the look and feel of our well-kept Village. If you didn't know better, you'd swear you were in a quaint New England college town! There's a reason behind this phenomenon. Granville was founded by settlers from Massachusetts and Connecticut over two hundred years ago, who arrived with a clear vision of their new home. Key elements of that initial concept are still evident today. You may even be reminded of Lerner and Loewe's charming musical, Brigadoon. In that classic production, a magical village in the Scottish highlands appears only for one day every one hundred years. This mystical phenomenon occurs in order to protect Brigadoon's warmth and simplicity from being changed by the outside world.

There's more to the story, of course, but you may nonetheless recognize some parallels upon your first visit to Granville. However, unlike Brigadoon, Granville does not disappear into the mist for centuries at a time. Despite our reverence for our historical past, we strive to continually rejuvenate and renew our village.

In this year's publication, you'll find three stories which describe the thoughtfulness, care, and commitment behind the renovation of several iconic landmarks in our Village. In recent years, Denison University acquired both the Granville Inn and the Donald Ross-designed Granville Golf Course (now known as the Denison Golf Club at Granville). After a nearly year-long renovation effort the Granville Inn re-opened in May and, thanks to Denison's new stewardship, golfers will continue to play on one of the most scenic and challenging public courses in Ohio. Equally impressive are the remarkable renovation efforts currently underway at the historic Buxton Inn. The Buxton is honoring its distinction as being the oldest continuously operating Inn in Ohio by conducting its rejuvenation and renovation – one room at a time – while remaining open. It is a great comfort to Granville residents and visitors alike that these two landmark properties will continue to operate as Inns and serve our community for many years to come.

In this issue you'll also learn that Granville offers a number of highly respected bed and breakfast options. And, you'll find a feature story about the Eating Local initiative, what this means, and why Granville has truly become a food destination. True to our agricultural roots and heritage, Granville is at the forefront of this growing national trend. We're proud of the inroads that have been made in efforts to source healthy and locally grown produce and farm products. Finally, we also take an opportunity this year to spotlight the remarkable success of Kendal at Granville – a unique Quaker-based continuing care retirement community. In 2015, Kendal at Granville will observe its tenth anniversary. They are a shining example of a high-caliber, community-focused service organization which has thrived in the local area.

I hope I have enticed you to visit and explore all that Granville has to offer. Words and pictures alone aren't sufficient to tell the full story. If you have the opportunity,

I encourage you to stop by the Chamber of Commerce office located in the heart of the Village. We'd love to tell you more about our unique hometown!

When Denison University purchased the Granville Inn in 2013, it wasn't following a long-term strategy to enter the restaurant and lodging business. Rather, the college realized it was time to step in when the previous purchase contract was pulled.

"We feel fortunate to be able to act on this opportunity to invest in our remarkable community and in this iconic property," said Seth Patton, Vice President for Finance and Management at Denison, "We believe it is important for the continued health of the village and surrounding area to keep the Inn viable. Not only is it a significant local employer, its services are important to Granville's downtown and to Denison visitors, as well."

The college has invested heavily in the Inn, which opened in 1924. The $9 million restoration and renovation has been sensitive to the original architecture, which was in the style of a grand English-style manor house. Local legend has it that scenes of a 1942 Henry Fonda movie based on a script written by James Thurber, "The Male Animal," were filmed in part at the Inn. Indeed, Thurber was rumored to have spent quite some time in Granville and the Inn itself is referenced in the movie.

"Denison certainly did not plan to become an innkeeper," said Patton, "but because of the strong ties and shared interests between Denison and Granville, we are committed to this project. The goal is to enhance the Granville Inn, making it a vital and successful business."

Columbus Hospitality has been selected to run the Inn's daily operations as well as the food services at another recent Denison acquisition, the Denison Golf Club at Granville, formerly known as the Granville Golf Course. The golf course was given as a gift to the college from its shareholders in 2014.

It is appropriate that the two properties are once again linked through ownership; they were both built by John Sutphin Jones who hired legendary golf course architect Donald Ross to design the course and prominent Columbus architect Frank L. Packard to design the Inn. Packard also redesigned another Jones property, the Bryn Du Mansion, which was originally built in 1865, and the Granville Public Library, a project for which Jones donated $10.000 in 1922.

The Denison Golf Club, long noted as one of the best public courses in the Midwest, is a prime example of Ross' genius, taking full advantage of the rolling Welsh Hills terrain to create spectacular views and challenging holes. Hole No. 18, with a vista of the village of Granville in the foreground and the Denison campus atop College Hill beyond, is especially stunning.

The gorgeous 1924 course is still true to Ross' vision, though it has been updated to be even more appealing to players of all levels. "We want to make this a very friendly course for everyone who likes to play — from serious amateurs to those who just want to enjoy a day in beautiful surroundings," says Ben Cavey, Regional Operations Manager for Davey Golf, the firm chosen to manage the Denison Golf Club.

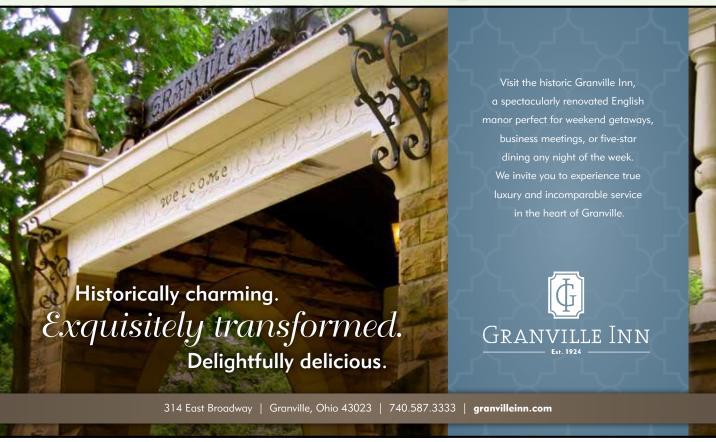

Historic Charm Meets Modern Luxury at the Newly Restored Granville Inn Solve by Jill Buterbaugh

For more than 90 years the Granville Inn has been a treasured landmark, community gathering place and destination in the Village of Granville.

The Inn was purchased by Denison University in 2013 and after a carefully planned and meticulously executed restoration and renovation the Granville Inn re-opened its doors to the community in May.

A labor of lowe for many, the planning and construction took just over one year to complete. And, in recognition of the important relationship between the Inn and the community, every effort was made to work with local continued on next page.

craftsmen and to source local materials. Robertson Construction of Heath, Ohio, was responsible for overseeing the renovation and other services including design, plumbing, electrical, painting and finish work which was all performed by central Ohio companies.

Designed to maintain the original splendor while adding modern amenities

The renovation team sought guidance from local historians, archives from Denison University, and even artifacts found carefully tucked into corners and hidden behind walls to guide the restoration.

Nine new guest rooms were added on the third floor by raising the roof on the back side of the building, creating a total of 39, including three suites. The renovated Inn also features the addition of modernized mechanicals, most notably an elevator, as well as new heating and cooling systems, fire alarms and sprinklers.

The former Carriage House was transformed into an intimate new event space suitable for up to 60 people. The three Carriage House doors open into a walled courtyard creating a lovely outdoor entertaining area perfect for small weddings, parties, social and business gatherings.

Denison Hall, formerly known as the Great Hall, received a complete facelift with higher ceilings, new carpeting, updated fixtures and artwork. All of the banquet and meeting spaces have been equipped with state-of-the art audio visual equipment and technology that provides a significant upgrade to what the Inn previously offered and creates a functional and unique option for business meetings and retreats.

Perhaps the most noticeable change that has come from the renovation was made to accommodate today's more casual dining trends. The former pub space is now the formal dining room, and the area that formerly hosted the main dining room is a larger, livelier tavern space — with restored original wood paneling, original light fixtures and working fireplaces.

The heart of the Inn remains the kitchen

The state-of-the-art restaurant and catering kitchens are a new 'canvas' for the chef and his team, inspiring incredible new dishes along with traditional customer favorites. The award-winning Oak Room restaurant offers fine dining with chef-inspired menus, creative entrées, and a sophisticated ambiance perfect for even the most special occasion. The new Tavern at the Inn is a warm and welcoming spot where guests can enjoy classic tavern dishes such as fish and chips, specialty burgers and soups, along with daily and weekly chef specials and seasonal offerings. The Tavern is the perfect place to enjoy European continental breakfast, lunch, dinner, or drinks any day of the week.

Whether passing through town, planning a getaway, dreaming about a wedding or simply in search of a delicious bite to eat, be sure to stop in and experience the true luxury and incomparable service of the new Granville Inn.

In the Village of Granville eating locally means local restaurants using locally sourced ingredients.

The Farm-to-Table movement has swept the nation with chefs sourcing products grown in local gardens, supporting family farms, and utilizing their community food infrastructure. Licking County is no different — with the founding of the 30 Mile Meal Project, members of our community are working to promote a local food collaboration that facilitates institutional and restaurant purchasing and promotes local food access, all while furthering the goal of economic development in and around Licking County.

Granville is uniquely suited to take full advantage of this local movement.

Many restaurants source products from community farms. This may range from offering a locally brewed beer on tap to creating a menu that takes full advantage of the numerous local farm yields. Our highly respected Granville Farmers Market brings more than 50 local vendors to the community every Saturday morning (from early May through October), with offerings that range from in-season vegetables and humanely raised meats to delicious baked goods, and flowers grown in county soil. While families certainly take advantage of the Market, chefs also can be seen perusing the fresh produce as the official cowbell rings, signifying the opening of the Market.

When visiting Granville to enjoy the Farmers Market take time to stay for lunch. Many restaurants will have at least one daily special composed of items freshly acquired from the Market that morning. The lettuce or beans picked at sunrise by a local farmer may be part of a delicious, savory entrée at lunch time. And in Granville, that lunch may not only include local produce and meat, but beer, wine, ice cream, and locally roasted coffee.

The proximity of Granville to the Columbus metropolitan area has increased development pressures on the area. In spite of this increased continued on page 22 pressure, the Village has managed to retain its distinctive small town/rural character without the suburban sprawl so common throughout central Ohio. More than ever, consumers are aware of the importance of sustainable local food — for the health of their families as well as for the health of the planet. Licking County is at the forefront of this movement, and Granville, at its epicenter, is poised to offer visitors a food experience.

Not only Granville restaurants have taken advantage of local food, but also large purchasers, including Denison University, the Granville Schools, and the Licking Memorial Hospital. Such organizations purchase large quantities from local producers, spurring economic development in and around Licking County. These actions provide welcomed consumer education surrounding agriculture and local food and, in turn, strengthen markets for local producers and processors while capturing more of the local food dollar.

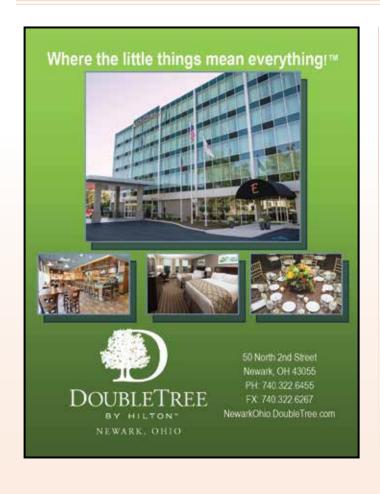

The Granville community takes pride in locally produced food — and not just because of the health benefits or for the knowledge of origin. Granville residents support the family farms that have sustained our Village since 1805 as well as the new producers who have made it their goal to grow and sell heirloom, quality foods to our community.

Kendal at Granville Celebrates Ten Years

by Ashley Wade

Nearly 20 years ago, two local couples began to turn their dream of a different kind of retirement living into reality.

Jane and Jack Heller and Dee and Dave Richards recognized the charm and draw of the Granville Village during their time spent at Denison University. Later in life, both couples migrated back to the Village through varying career paths and determined this also was the ideal place to retire. Spring 2015 is a milestone for Kendal at Granville as the campus celebrates ten years since welcoming its founding residents.

KENDAL

Affiliated with The Kendal Corporation, Kendal at Granville is a not-for-profit continuing care retirement community whose Quaker heritage emphasizes respect for the individual, excellence in service, social responsibility and fiscal integrity. The retirement community is located on a 93 acre site just one mile southwest of the Village of Granville.

The Buxton Inn– A Historic Renovation

by Adrienne Molnar

The historic Buxton Inn was opened in 1812 as a tavern with overnight rooms at the crossroads of old stagecoach roads servicing central Ohio.

Listed on the National Register of Historic Places, the Buxton is Ohio's oldest continuously operating Inn using its original building. The Inn served as Granville's first post office, has hosted many dignitaries and celebrity guests, and is highly regarded as a well-ordered house with excellent cuisine and a home-like atmosphere.

In December 2014, three local preservationists led by Robert Schilling purchased the Inn with the intent to preserve its distinguished history and insure that the Inn will continue to operate for many years to come. Mr. Schilling is no stranger to difficult projects and, since the early 1980s, improving communities through historical preservation has been his passion. Indeed, he seems to relish those projects that others feel are too challenging, too complex, or simply too overwhelming. Regarding this effort, Robert stated, "We are not only reviving a business, we are preserving a piece of our unique American history. For over two hundred years, everyday people, titans of business, and builders of the American foundation, have come together to create the Buxton Inn's legacy. It is important to us to honor that legacy."

So how do the new stewards of The Buxton plan on securing its future? The first task was to study the Inn, its history, buildings, staff and clientele to determine what people liked and what they would like to see changed. Second, was to apply for Historic Tax Credits to help fund the renovations. Once these are secured, extensive renovation can begin in midsummer. In the meantime, guest rooms are being revamped to provide greater comfort for travelers. Original hardwood floors are being exposed, linens upgraded, and bathrooms refreshed. In addition, a new website has been created to reflect the historical elegance of The Buxton. Throughout these renovation efforts, the Inn plans to remain open to continue to serve its guests and the local community.

The Buxton's General Manager, Adrienne Molnar, is pleased to be a part of the Inn's future and looks forward to working closely with organizations including the Granville Area Chamber of Commerce and the Greater Licking County Convention and Visitor's Bureau. "2015 is going to be an exciting year for Granville and Licking County," said Adrienne. "There are many great projects in the works. We're eager to work with our local organizations to increase leisure travel and attract business clientele to the area. We look forward to continuing our role as an upstanding part of the Granville community and a steward of its rich history."
